Peace Agreement Drafter's Handbook

Prepared by

The Public International Law & Policy Group

June 2005

USER'S GUIDE

The Public International Law & Policy Group's (PILPG) Peace Agreement Drafter's Handbook is a comprehensive guide on how to draft a peace agreement based upon comparative analysis of over sixty peace agreements in the past thirty years. This Handbook is intended to assist drafters, mediators, negotiators, and anyone else interested in the substantive and practical contents contained in peace agreements. The Handbook is designed to facilitate drafting peace agreements quickly, efficiently, and effectively.

The Handbook sets out for the drafter the essential components found in the majority of peace agreements since approximately sixty to seventy percent of all peace agreements draw on similar elements and language. However, every conflict is unique and the drafter may have to make adjustments to certain elements to enhance the agreement's relevancy and applicability to a particular conflict. Therefore, each chapter should be considered as ad hoc and reshaping the new agreement to address the nuances of each party's needs will be necessary. Similarly, the comparative provisions and sample language provided in the Handbook are by no means exclusive, recommended, or mandatory. The purpose of the Handbook is to assist a drafter prepare a well-crafted agreement and enhance the durability of future agreements by drawing upon the best practices from prior agreements.

The Handbook consists of several chapters all following the same basic format. Each chapter focuses on a particular section commonly found in peace agreements such as ceasefires, economic restructuring, and property restitution. Each chapter first identifies the basic elements in that particular section of a peace agreement. For example, in ceasefires, the basic elements include the identification and definition of prohibited acts, separation of forces, and verification, supervision, and monitoring. The primary notes found in each chapter provide a brief overview of a specific element. These elements are then addressed through comparative analysis. The analysis provides for the drafter language found in other peace agreements from which the most relevant to the drafter's conflict can be selected. Each section then concludes with sample language.

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

The displacement of populations as a consequence of armed conflict is a significant problem. The resolution process requires the cooperation of the country of origin, the countries of asylum, and the international community. Ensuring sustainable return is foremost the responsibility of the country of origin toward its own people, but the full implementation of such an effort requires sustained action and support from the countries of asylum and the international community. Drafters of peace agreements often give careful consideration to including countries of asylum and the international community as Parties to the agreement.

Because resettling uprooted populations is challenging and complex, drafters aim for language that firmly establishes the Parties' commitments to the resettlement process. Similarly, drafters must also recognize the difference between refugees, internally displaced persons ("IDPs"), and economic migrants.

Refugees and IDPs flee their home country because of a threat, while economic migrants leave a country voluntarily to seek a better life. Refugees are those persons who have crossed an international border seeking sanctuary, while IDPs have fled persecution but have not crossed an international border. Drafters tend to be aware of which uprooted populations need to be addressed in the agreement. For the purposes of this handbook, the terms "displaced persons" and/or "uprooted populations" will be used to denote both refugees and IDPs.

Most agreements on refugee return share five common elements. All refugee return agreements begin with a preamble, provide definitions, provide language guaranteeing the parties' cooperation to the resettlement process, enumerate the rights of displaced persons, and define the process for implementation, usually through an implementation commission.

This chapter expands upon the five basic elements found in most refugee return agreements using comparative language and by providing sample language. Also included in this chapter is a summary of agreements addressing refugees and IDPs and list of additional sources of information.

BASIC ELEMENTS

Primary Note: Most comprehensive agreements on uprooted populations address all of the elements below. The language often varies depending on the size of the population, the extent of the resettlement that will take place, and the significance of the problem. Additionally, most agreements articulate the mechanisms that will be used to implement the framework on which the Parties have agreed.

Preamble: The preamble may include general language that recognizes the existence of uprooted populations, and expresses the Parties' commitment to the solution set forth in the agreement. A discussion of the Parties' objectives in adopting the agreement will also help guide the international community in the event of its involvement with the implementation of the agreement.

Refugee Definitions: Because of the practical and legal differences between refugees and IDPs, refugee return agreements identify the persons to whom the agreement applies. A definition of those persons to whom the agreement applies is necessary to clarify the legal protections and obligations that are due to such persons. Although IDPs are considered equal to returning refugees in the relief and resettlement effort, this should be clearly specified in the agreement. If the agreement is to apply to both refugees and IDPs, the drafters may wish to choose a term that encompasses both groups and state it as such.

Guarantees for Cooperation in Resettlement Process: The return of displaced persons is impossible without the Parties' commitment to end the fighting that caused the original flight. The Parties must commit to a lasting peace providing guarantees of safety and security for the return of displaced persons. The Parties must also commit to assist and cooperate with international groups in facilitating the return and resettlement of displaced persons.

Rights of Displaced Persons: There are four essential rights of displaced persons that effective agreements respect: (1) the right to voluntary return; (2) the right to citizenship, identity and participation; (3) the right to property; and (4) general human rights.

Implementation Mechanisms: Agreements will often define the institutional framework, usually a commission, to oversee the implementation process. The agreement will also identify the process for the selection of commission members. Included in this section are the functions of the commission, a clear mandate to guide the implementation of the resettlement process, and specific milestones for the initial stages of the return process. Sometimes assistance for facilitating the resettlement process is available through the international community.

COMPARATIVE ANALYSIS

Preamble

Primary Note: The preamble may include general language that recognizes the existence of uprooted populations, and expresses the Parties' commitment to the solution set forth in the agreement. A discussion of the Parties' objectives in adopting the agreement will also help guide the international community in the event of its involvement with the implementation of the agreement.

Note: The Burundi Agreement includes a broad statement of support for the refugee return process and express commitment to seek assistance from the international community.

Burundi Agreement, Protocol IV, Chapter I, Article 2, Paragraph 1

The Government of Burundi shall encourage the return of refugees and sinistrés and resettle and reintegrate them. It shall seek the support of other countries and international non-governmental organizations in carrying out this responsibility.

Note: The Guatemala Agreement includes a detailed description of the refugee return strategy, which outlines long-term, systemic goals and objectives for lasting repatriation and societal peace.

Guatemala Agreement, Article 1

The comprehensive resettlement strategy shall have the following objectives:

To ensure that displaced persons fully enjoy all their rights and fundamental freedoms, in particular those rights and freedoms which were affected during the uprooting process;

To reintegrate displaced persons, which were socially, economically and politically marginalized, and create the conditions that would allow them to be a dynamic factor in the economic, social, political and cultural development of the country;

To give priority to the fight against poverty and extreme poverty, which have had a particularly serious effect on areas where the population has been uprooted, and which largely correspond to the resettlement areas;

To develop and strengthen the democratization of State structures, ensuring that the constitutional rights of displaced persons are respected at the individual, community, municipal, departmental, regional and national levels;

To promote genuine reconciliation, fostering a culture of peace in the resettlement areas and at the national level based on participation, mutual tolerance, reciprocal respect and commonality of interests.

Note: The Cambodia Agreement denotes a firm acceptance of responsibility for the assisted, orderly and peaceful return of displaced persons, and a stated recognition of the need to cooperate with host refuge countries to prevent further problems.

Cambodia Agreement, Annex 4, Part I

As part of the comprehensive political settlement, every assistance will need to be given to Cambodian refugees and displaced persons as well as to countries of temporary refuge and the country of origin in order to facilitate the voluntary return of all Cambodian refugees and displaced persons in a peaceful and orderly manner. It must also be ensured that there would be no residual problems for the countries of temporary refuge. The country of origin with responsibility towards its own people will accept their return as conditions become conducive.

Note: The Mozambique Agreement broadly recognizes displaced persons and the need for cooperation in their reintegration into national territory.

Mozambique Agreement, Protocol III, Part IV, Paragraph a

The parties undertake to cooperate in the repatriation and reintegration of Mozambican refugees and displaced persons in the national territory and the social integration of the war-disabled.”

Sample Language: Preamble

Recognizing the essential task of rehabilitation and resettlement of uprooted populations, and having identified the principles that will guide the resettlement process, the comprehensive repatriation strategy shall have the following objectives:

To ensure that displaced persons fully enjoy all the same rights and fundamental freedoms established for all citizens;

To reintegrate displaced persons and create the conditions that will allow them to participate fully in the economic, social, political and cultural development of the country;

To promote genuine reconciliation by fostering a culture of peace in the resettlement areas, and also at the national and regional levels, based on participation, mutual tolerance and respect.

Refugee Definitions

Primary Note: A definition of those persons to whom the agreement applies is necessary to clarify the legal protections and obligations that are due to such persons. Although IDPs are considered equal to returning refugees in the relief and resettlement effort, this should be clearly specified in the agreement. If the agreement is to apply to both refugees and IDPs, the drafters may wish to choose a term that encompasses both groups and state it as such.

The UNHCR defines refugees as “people who have left their own country because of a well-founded fear of persecution, or because their safety is threatened by events seriously disturbing public order.” The Organization of African Unity expands the definition of refugees to include persons who are compelled to leave their homeland on account of “external aggression, occupation, foreign domination, or events seriously disturbing public order.” The 1984 Cartagena Declaration on Refugees recommends that the term “refugee” also apply to “persons who have fled their country because their lives, safety, or freedom have been threatened by generalized violence, foreign aggression, internal conflicts, massive violation of human rights, or other circumstances which have seriously disturbed public order.” Previous agreements have drawn upon these formulations in defining to whom the language in their own agreement will apply.

Note: The Burundi Agreement provides an example of defining which groups are included this section of their agreement by both using a definition that relies on general international refugee definitions and further clarifying that the term “sinistrés” includes all groups of displaced persons and returnees.

Burundi Agreement, Chapter 1, Article 1

For the definition of the term ‘refugee,’ reference is made to international conventions, including the 1951 Geneva Convention Relative to the Status of Refugees, the 1966 Protocol Relative to the Status of Refugees and the 1969 Organization of African Unity Convention Governing the Specific Aspects of Refugee Problems in Africa.

The term ‘sinistrés’ designates all displaced, regrouped and dispersed persons and returnees.

Note: The Guatemala Agreement provides a clear definition of “uprooted population,” intending to include a broad range of displaced persons, whether grouped or dispersed, coupled with a straight-forward definition of “resettlement” to clarify the use of the term in context.

Guatemala Agreement, Article I

For the purposes of this Agreement, the term ‘uprooted population’ shall include all persons who have been uprooted for reasons connected with the armed conflict, whether they live within or outside Guatemala, and shall include, in particular, refugees, returnees and internally displaced persons, either dispersed or in groups, including popular resistance groups.

‘Resettlement’ shall mean the legal process of return of uprooted population groups and individuals to their place of origin or another place of their choice in Guatemalan territory, and their relocation and integration therein, in accordance with the Political Constitution of the Republic of Guatemala.

Sample Language: Refugee Definitions

For the purposes of this agreement, the term “displaced persons” shall include all persons who have left their homes, whether within or outside [country of origin], for reasons connected with the armed conflict. The term “returnees” refers to those displaced persons that are involved in the legal process of returning to their place of origin, or another place of their choice within the country of origin. [Include any clarification of other terms used to refer to refugees.]

Guarantees for Cooperation in Resettlement Process

Primary Note: The return of displaced persons is impossible without the Parties' commitment to end the conflict that caused the original flight. Therefore, a lasting peace has proven to be a necessary precondition to any successful resettlement to create an environment that will allow the displaced persons to return, resettle, and resume their lives. Moreover, the Parties must guarantee their cooperation with the UNHCR if it is involved in the resettlement process. Thus, the Parties must commit to: 1) end the violent conflict, thereby ensuring that resettlement is possible and those returnees will be safe and secure during the process; and 2) cooperate fully with the international community as it facilitates the return process by making resources, and access to all territories within state control available.

Guarantees of Safety and Security

Note: Lack of security and safety consistently present obstacles for the return of displaced persons to their areas of origin. The danger to displaced persons arises both during the process of return and after resettlement when the security of returning populations must be maintained. The language of the agreement sometimes establishes each party's affirmative obligation to ensure the safety and security of affected populations both during times of return and rehabilitation.

Note: The security of affected populations can be ensured by each country undertaking a protective role or by an outside party providing a protective and peacekeeping security force. The second option (an outside party providing protection and security) can be more successful, but the drafters must consider which option is appropriate to the specific circumstances of a conflict.

Note: Although, the level of specificity with which the agreement addresses the institutional framework for the security of displaced populations depends upon the scope of the agreement, detailed language about how security will be provided for displaced persons is generally essential for a sustainable return process. For example, the agreement may address issues such as the safety of border crossings, mine removal and the prevention of acts of violence against returnees. Oftentimes, the Parties must give special consideration to vulnerable groups such as women and children, orphans, and the mentally or physically disabled.

Note: The Guatemala Agreement offers a brief, yet specific plan to cooperate in the removal of mines and explosive devices along the resettlement areas out of concern for security.

Guatemala Agreement, Article II, Paragraph 4

Concerned about the security of those who are being resettled or who live in the zones affected by the conflict, the Parties recognize the urgent need to remove all types of mines or explosive devices buried or abandoned in these areas, and they commit themselves to cooperate fully in these activities.

Note: The Georgia Agreement includes a more general guarantee of safety and protection from harassment for displaced persons during repatriation, and continuing into rehabilitation.

Georgia Agreement, Provision 2 and Provision 3, Paragraph f

For the purpose of the present agreement, the parties will guarantee the safety of refugees and displaced persons in the course of the voluntary repatriation and rehabilitation operations to be organized.

The Parties shall ensure that repatriates, upon return, will be protected from harassment, including unauthorized charges or fees and threat to life or property.

Note: The Bosnia Agreement contains a comprehensive outline of measures the Parties will institute in order to ensure the safe and respectful return of displaced persons, to discourage the harassment, discrimination, or persecution of returnees, and to provide recourse for violations of these basic rights.

Bosnia Agreement, Annex 7, Article I, Paragraphs 2 and 3

The Parties shall ensure that refugees and displaced persons are permitted to return in safety, without risk of harassment, intimidation, persecution, or discrimination, particularly on account of their ethnic origin, religious belief, or political opinion.

The Parties shall take all necessary steps to prevent activities within their territories which would hinder or impede the safe and voluntary return of refugees and displaced persons. To demonstrate their commitment to securing full respect for the human rights and fundamental freedoms of all persons within their jurisdiction and creating without delay conditions suitable for return of refugees and displaced persons, the Parties shall take immediately the following confidence building measures:

the repeal of domestic legislation and administrative practices with discriminatory intent or effect;

the prevention and prompt suppression of any written or verbal incitement, through media or otherwise, of ethnic or religious hostility or hatred;

the dissemination, through the media, of warnings against, and the prompt suppression of, acts of retribution by military, paramilitary, and police services, and by other public officials or private individuals;

the protection of ethnic and/or minority populations wherever they are found and the provision of immediate access to these populations by international humanitarian organizations and monitors; the prosecution, dismissal or transfer, as appropriate, of persons in military, paramilitary, and police forces, and other public servants, responsible for serious violations of the basic rights of persons belonging to ethnic or minority groups.

Note: The Cambodia Agreement makes a brief statement of intention to create a safe and secure return process for displaced persons, with specific attention to clearing border crossings and routes of hazards such as mines.

Cambodia Agreement, Annex 4, Part III, Paragraph 12

Those responsible for organizing and supervising the repatriation operation will need to ensure that conditions of security are created for the movement of the refugees and displaced persons. In this respect, it is imperative that appropriate border crossing points and routes be designated and cleared of mines and other hazards.

Note: The Sierra Leone Agreement includes a general pledge to respect the status and rights of refugees and displaced persons.

Sierra Leone Agreement, Part Five, Article XXIII

As a reaffirmation of their commitment to the observation of the conventions and principles of human rights and the status of refugees, the Parties shall take effective and appropriate measures to ensure that the right of Sierra Leoneans to asylum is fully respected and that no camps or dwellings of refugees or displaced persons are violated.

Note: The Liberia Agreement lays out a call for refugees and displaced persons to return to their places of origin in combination with a commitment from the Parties to create conditions that will allow a safe and dignified return.

Liberia Agreement, Article 18, Paragraphs 1 and 2

The Parties hereby commit themselves immediately and permanently to bring to an end any further external or internal displacement of Liberians and to create the conditions that will allow all refugees and displaced persons to, respectively, voluntarily repatriate and return to Liberia to their places of origin or habitual residence under conditions of safety and dignity.

The Parties further call upon Liberian refugees and displaced persons to return to Liberia and to their places of origin or habitual residence and declare that they shall not be jeopardized in any ethnic, political, religious, regional or geographical considerations.

Sample Language: Guarantee of Safety and Security

The Parties are committed to achieving the successful return of [specify and define displaced persons covered under this provision] under peaceful and secure conditions. The Parties shall guarantee the safety and security of those persons in the course of return and rehabilitation operations. The Parties shall not attack, intimidate, or harass returning populations in any way. At all times, the human rights of the returnees shall be fully respected. Special considerations, protections, and processes will be given to vulnerable groups such as women, children, the elderly, and the disabled.

Cooperation with the International Community

Note: The Parties sometimes commit to facilitate the return and resettlement of displaced persons by honoring international laws governing refugees and internally displaced persons, the activities of groups providing repatriation assistance, and trans-border transportations. The Parties generally further agree to jointly and individually cooperate in all ways with each other and with international and national organizations that are implementing programs for the voluntary repatriation process.

Note: The Burundi Agreement contains a provision granting unrestricted and safe access, in addition to facilitation aid without discrimination, to international and non-governmental organizations for purposes of humanitarian assistance.

Burundi Agreement, Protocol IV, Chapter I, Article 7

The Government shall allow international organizations and international and local non-governmental organizations unrestricted access to returnees and other sinistrés for purposes of the delivery of humanitarian assistance. It must guarantee the safety of the staff of such organizations and must also facilitate the provision of short-term aid for repatriation, appropriately supervised and without discrimination.

Note: The Georgia Agreement has a detailed provision which provides UNHCR unrestricted access to carry out its mandate and specifically commits the government to cooperate with UNHCR in the safe travels of displaced persons and the transport of humanitarian goods.

Georgia Agreement, Provision 11, Paragraphs a-d

UNHCR shall have direct and unhindered access to all displaced persons/refugees from Abkhazia in order to undertake activities essential to the discharge of its mandate and operational and monitoring responsibilities;

Travel shall be facilitated between and within all areas where refugees and displaced persons are located and areas of return for the personnel of the United Nations and other relevant international and non-governmental agencies cooperating with the United Nations in repatriation, reintegration and rehabilitation programmes. It shall include the free use of airspace and authorized airstrips and airports for relief flights and the exemption from taxes and duties of all goods imported for use in the voluntary repatriation programme of displaced persons/refugees from Abkhazia and for the provision of relief integration and rehabilitation assistance to the Abkhazian region by the United Nations and cooperating agencies, as well as the expeditious clearance and handling of such goods;

The Russian Federation will guarantee unimpeded transit of humanitarian supplies through its territory for the purposes of the present Agreement;

UNHCR shall establish local offices, as deemed appropriate, at locations to be approved by the Parties concerned, to facilitate voluntary repatriation, reintegration and rehabilitation.

Note: The Bosnia Agreement expressly grants unrestricted access to relevant international, domestic and non-governmental organizations along with a pledge to facilitate the humanitarian aid and reintegration assistance of those organizations.

Bosnia Agreement, Annex 7, Article III, Paragraph 2

The Parties shall give full and unrestricted access by UNHCR, the International Committee of the Red Cross (“ICRC”), the United Nations Development Programme (“UNDP”) and other relevant international, domestic and nongovernmental organizations to all refugees and displaced persons, with a view to facilitating the work of those organizations in tracing persons, the provision of medical assistance, food distribution, reintegration assistance, the provision of temporary and permanent housing, and other activities vital to the discharge of their mandates and operational responsibilities without administrative impediments. The activities shall include traditional protection functions and the monitoring of basic human rights and humanitarian conditions, as well as the implementation of the provisions of this Chapter.

Note: The Cambodia Agreement provides another example of a detailed provision granting unrestricted access to UNHCR, ICRC and other international organizations to undertake activities that are vital to their monitoring and operational mandates.

Cambodia Agreement, Annex 4, Part III, Paragraph 8

Consistent with respect for principles of national sovereignty in the countries of temporary refuge and origin, and in close cooperation with the countries of temporary refuge and origin, full access by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR), ICRC and other relevant international agencies should be guaranteed to all Cambodian refugees and displaced persons, with a view to the agencies undertaking the census, tracing, medical assistance, food distribution and other activities vital to the discharge of their mandate and operational responsibilities; such access should also be provided in Cambodia to enable the relevant international organizations to carry out their traditional monitoring as well as operational responsibilities.

Note: The Kosovo Agreement contains a more general commitment to cooperate with efforts of UNHCR concerning the repatriation and monitoring of returnees.

Kosovo Agreement, Article II, Paragraph 4

The Parties shall cooperate fully with efforts by the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) and other international and non-governmental organizations concerning the repatriation and return of persons, including those organizations monitoring the treatment of persons following their return.

Note: The Liberia Agreement makes a proclamation for cooperation by Parties and organizations necessary for the repatriation and reintegration of displaced persons, including mechanisms of implementation such as joint repatriation committees and facilitated access of UNHCR for humanitarian assistance and monitoring programs.

Liberia Agreement, Article 18, Paragraph 4, Parts a-c

The Parties proclaim that they shall, jointly or individually, cooperate in all necessary ways with themselves and with the above-mentioned organizations in order to facilitate the repatriation, return and reintegration of the refugees and displaced persons. Amongst others, they agree to:

Establish all necessary mechanisms or arrangements, such as joint repatriation committees, which would facilitate contacts, communications and work with the relevant organizations for purposes of implementing the repatriation, return and reintegration operation and to enable effective decision-making and implementation of the relevant activities;

Facilitate access by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees and other organizations to the refugees and displaced persons who have returned so as to deliver the necessary humanitarian assistance and programmes and monitor their situation;

Guarantee and provide security to the Office of the United Nation as High Commissioner for Refugees and the other relevant organizations, their staff, vehicles, equipment and resources necessary to carry out their work...”

Sample Language: Cooperation with International Community

[Name of international organization or general label for such aid organizations] shall have full and guaranteed access, by land, air and sea, to all territories and displaced persons in order to implement resettlement programs. The Parties shall cooperate in all ways necessary to ensure that the resettlement programs may be implemented. The Parties will not tax workers, goods, or services provided by outside governments or international aid organizations. The Parties shall make a commitment to protecting the safety and security of all outside government and international aid workers and their equipment.

Rights of Displaced Persons

Primary Note: There are four essential rights of displaced persons that effective agreements respect: (1) the right to voluntary return; (2) the right to citizenship, identity and participation; (3) the right to property; and (4) general human rights.

The Right to Voluntary Return

Note: Since it appears in every agreement that covers displaced persons, the right to voluntary return appears to be the most fundamental right guaranteed to all displaced persons. Furthermore, states have an international customary legal obligation to respect, allow, and ensure the right to return. With respect to displaced persons, the other rights mentioned in these agreements are only bestowed through the right to return to the country of origin. Conversely, forced repatriation is illegal as long as the conditions from which the refugee fled still exist. In a situation where the refugee population may be a social or economic burden on the host nation or refugee camps pose a potential security concern for the host nation, the voluntary nature of the right to return is commonly cited by the drafters of the agreement. In addition, the asylum countries are sometimes involved in the drafting process and made signatories of the agreement where feasible to provide legitimacy to the agreement as well as to help facilitate the appropriate enforcement mechanisms.

Note: The Burundi Agreement contains a brief declaration that all refugees are entitled to return to their country and specifically return to their homes if they so desire.

Burundi Agreement, Protocol IV, Chapter I, Article 2, Paragraph 2, Parts a and f

All Burundian refugees must be able to return to their country.

All sinistrés wishing to do so must be able to return to their homes.

Note: The Georgia Agreement provides a general statement that guarantees the right of displaced persons to voluntarily return under safe, free and dignified conditions and without discrimination or other restrictions on movement or establishment.

Georgia Agreement, Provision 3, Paragraphs a-d

Displaced persons/refugees have the right to return voluntarily to their places of origin or residence irrespective of their ethnic, social or political affiliation under conditions of complete safety, freedom and dignity;

The voluntary character of the repatriation shall be ascertained and respected through appropriate arrangements.

Displaced persons/refugees shall have the right to return peacefully without risk of arrest, detention, imprisonment or legal criminal proceedings . . .

The Parties shall ensure that returnees, upon return, will enjoy freedom of movement and establishment including the right to return to the areas where they lived prior to leaving the conflict zone or to the area of their choice.

Note: The Bosnia Agreement makes a straightforward declaration that all displaced persons have the right to voluntarily return to their homes of origin.

Bosnia Agreement, Annex 7, Article I, Paragraph 1

All refugees and displaced persons have the right freely to return to their homes of origin.

Note: The Cambodia Agreement contains a general statement regarding displaced persons' right to voluntarily return to a destination of their choosing stressing the importance of preserving the family unity.

Cambodia Agreement, Annex 4, Part II, Paragraph 7

Repatriation of Cambodian refugees and displaced persons should be voluntary and their decision should be taken in full possession of the facts. Choice of destination within Cambodia should be that of the individual. The unity of the family must be preserved.

Sample Language: Right to Voluntary Return

All displaced persons have the right to voluntarily return to their homes in their country of origin. Their safety and dignity will be guaranteed throughout repatriation process.

The Right to Citizenship, Identity and Participation

Note: Agreements often try to ensure that displaced persons are not discriminated against because of their status stipulating various provisions such as restoring citizenship rights to displaced persons upon their return and restoring their identification and other forms of documentation so that they can participate in key aspects of civil society such as voting.

Note: The Burundi Agreement includes a general provision stating that returnees must enjoy fully restored citizen and property rights.

Burundi Agreement, Protocol IV, Chapter I, Article 2, Paragraph 2, Part e

Returnees must have their rights as citizens and their property restored to them in accordance with the laws and regulations in force in Burundi after the entry into force of the Agreement.

Note: The Guatemala Agreement specifically expresses recognition of issues surrounding lack of personal documentation and offers preparation of necessary steps to improve the personal documentation situation.

Guatemala Agreement, Article II, Paragraph 7

The lack of personal documentation for the majority of the uprooted population groups increases their vulnerability and limits their access to basic services and the enjoyment of their civil and political rights. This problem requires urgent solutions. Consequently, the Parties agree that the following steps are necessary:

In order to arrange for the documentation of uprooted persons as soon as possible, the Government, with the cooperation of the international community, shall intensify its efforts to streamline the necessary mechanisms, taking into account, where appropriate, the registers kept by the uprooted communities themselves; . . .

The necessary administrative rules to streamline formalities to ensure that children of uprooted persons born outside the country are registered as native Guatemalans . . . shall be promulgated;

For the implementation of the documentation programme, the Government shall request the cooperation of the United Nations and the international community.

Note: The Georgia Agreement includes a general provision ensuring that refugees and displaced persons will receive appropriate documentation upon return.

Georgia Agreement, Provision 3, Paragraph e

The Parties shall ensure that refugees and displaced persons, upon return, will get their expired documents (propiska, passport) extended and validated for their previous place of residence or the elected place of return.

Note: The Mozambique Agreement provides an assurance that refugees and displaced persons did not forfeit any rights or freedoms by having left their places of origin and that those persons will be registered and included in civil activities in their places of origin.

Mozambique Agreement, Protocol III, Article IV, Paragraphs c and d

Mozambican refugees and displaced persons shall not forfeit any of the rights and freedoms of citizens for having left their original places of residence;

Mozambican refugees and displaced persons shall be registered and included in the electoral rolls together with other citizens in their places of residence.

Note: The Kosovo Agreement contains a provision that guarantees the right to return to one's home along with the pledge that authorities will facilitate a safe return and provide proper documents.

Kosovo Agreement, Article II, Paragraph 3

The Parties recognize that all persons have the right to return to their homes. Appropriate authorities shall take all measures necessary to facilitate the safe return of persons, including issuing necessary documents.

Sample Language: Right To Citizenship

The citizenship and participation rights and privileges of displaced persons shall not be forfeited or otherwise affected due to their status as displaced persons. The rights and privileges of displaced persons shall be fully restored and guaranteed in their country of origin. Displaced persons shall not be discriminated against or prevented from participating in government or electing officials of their choice.

The Right to Property and Home

Note: Displaced persons are often conferred rights to be compensated for their property upon return. Property restoration and compensation guarantees appear in most agreements concerning displaced persons. Property concerns can be a significant obstacle to the return of displaced persons; however, the right to property and home is recognized by international law and are often provided for in the agreement and subsequently enforced. Often, the property has been destroyed, stolen, or is occupied by another. Therefore, it may necessary to develop mechanisms to resolve property disputes, reassign land, and compensate displaced persons for their losses. Sometimes agreements establish a national fund to help meet the property needs of displaced persons. The Parties may denationalize state-owned land and distribute it to displaced persons who are unable to return to their original land. Finally, the Parties sometimes institute new property laws to address problems with land compensation and distribution.

Note: The Burundi Agreement has provisions declaring returnees' rights to their property in accordance with national laws and the right to their home of origin, keeping in mind principles of equity, especially gender.

Burundi Agreement, Protocol IV, Chapter I, Article 2, Paragraphs 2, Parts e, f, and h

Returnees must have their rights as citizens and their property restored to them in accordance with the laws and regulations in force in Burundi after the entry into force of the Agreement;

All sinistrés wishing to do so must be able to return to their homes;

In the return of the refugees and the resettlement and reintegration of the returnees and displaced and regrouped persons, the principle of equity, including gender equity, must be strictly applied in order to avoid any measure or treatment that discriminates against or favours any one among these categories.

Note: The Guatemala Agreement has provisions to ensure that abandonment of land due to armed conflict will not be considered voluntary abandonment and that the government pledges to facilitate the return of land and eliminate discrimination against women in such housing and development endeavors.

Guatemala Agreement, Part II, Paragraph 9 and Part III, Paragraph 8

In the particular case of abandonment of land as a result of armed conflict, the Government undertakes to revise and promote legal provisions to ensure that such an act is not considered to be voluntary abandonment, and to ratify the inalienable nature of landholding rights. In this context, it shall promote the return of land to the original holders and/or shall seek adequate compensatory solutions.

The Government undertakes to eliminate any form of de facto or de jure discrimination against women with regard to access to land, housing, credits and participation in development projects. The gender-based approach shall be incorporated into the policies, programmes and activities of the comprehensive development strategy.

Note: The Georgia Agreement offers a provision stating that properties (real and personal) of displaced persons shall be returned or appropriately compensated for through a claims mechanism.

Georgia Agreement, Provision 3, Paragraph g

Returnees shall, upon return, get back movable and immovable properties they left behind and should be helped to do so, or to receive whenever possible and appropriate compensation for their lost properties if return of property appears not feasible. The Commission . . . will establish a mechanism for such claims. Such compensation should be worked out in the framework of the reconstruction/rehabilitation programmes to be established with financial assistance through the United Nations Voluntary Fund.

Note: The Bosnia Agreement has a general statement that displaced persons maintain the right to return to their places of origin and to have their property returned to them or to be compensated appropriately.

Bosnia Agreement, Annex 7, Article I

All refugees and displaced persons have the right freely to return to their homes of origin. They shall have the right to have restored to them property of which they were deprived in the course of hostilities since 1991 and to be compensated for any property that cannot be restored to them.

Note: The Mozambique Agreement guarantees restitution of property owned by displaced persons and a legal right to recover such property from those in possession.

Mozambique Agreement, Protocol III, Article IV, Paragraph e

Mozambican refugees and displaced persons shall be guaranteed restitution of property owned by them which is still in existence and the right to take legal action to secure the return of such property from individuals in possession of it.

Note: The Kosovo Agreement also contains a general declaration that returnees have the right to recover their real property and personal possessions upon return.

Kosovo Agreement, Article II, Paragraph 3

All persons shall have the right to reoccupy their real property, assert their occupancy rights in state-owned property, and recover their other property and personal possessions. The Parties shall take all measures necessary to readmit returning persons to Kosovo.

Sample Language: Right To Property

All displaced persons have the right to return to their homes, land, and property. If return to their homes, land, or property proves impossible, they shall be justly compensated for their losses. [Include method of compensation] A property commission will be established to adjudicate property disputes and assist in returning property to its rightful owners.

Distribution of aid resources and property will take place without regard to the proposed recipient's gender, language, ethnic identity, racial identity, religion, party affiliation, geographic location, status as a displaced or formerly displaced person, or any other discriminatory basis. The Parties shall establish a national fund to ensure that resettlement and redistribution programs may be financed and implemented.

Respect for Human Rights

Note: Human rights are commonly found in all phases of the resettlement process. Parties to a peace agreement often cooperate with the countries to which refugees have fled to ensure that the host countries respect the human rights of refugees, and allow the refugees to leave in a safe and dignified manner. The Parties can also help refugees settle any property claims that refugees have in their asylum country. Furthermore, the Parties sometimes recognize that some classes of displaced persons, such as women and children, are more vulnerable than others and therefore establish special protections for them. Drafters can make specific reference to international human rights treaties and incorporate the respective protections into the peace agreement. Furthermore, if the Parties to the agreement are not signatories to international and regional human rights instruments, the peace agreement process can be an opportunity for them to become signatories to those agreements and to adopt existing enforcement mechanisms.

Note: The Burundi Agreement contains a provision that ensures the government will provide special assistance and protection to vulnerable groups in rehabilitation.

Burundi Agreement, Protocol IV, Chapter I, Article 10

The Government shall ensure, through special assistance, the protection, rehabilitation and advancement of vulnerable groups, namely child heads of families, orphans, street children, unaccompanied minors, traumatized children, widows, women heads of families, juvenile delinquents, the physically and mentally disabled, etc.

Note: The Guatemala Agreement makes a general declaration denoting respect for human rights especially in the resettlement process, and a re-statement of Parties' commitments to comply with Comprehensive Agreement on Human Rights.

Guatemala Agreement, Part II, Article I, Paragraphs 1 and 2

Full respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms is essential for the security and dignity of resettlement processes. The Parties reiterate their decision to comply fully with the Comprehensive Agreement on Human Rights, which took effect on 29 March 1994, promoting respect for the human rights of uprooted populations, one of the vulnerable sectors which deserve particular attention, with special vigilance.

Note: The Cambodia Agreement has a general provision that expresses respect for human rights during the repatriation and resettlement processes.

Cambodia Agreement, Annex 4, Part II, Paragraph 4

There must be full respect for the human rights and fundamental freedoms of all Cambodians, including those of the repatriated refugees and displaced persons, in recognition of their entitlement to live in peace and security, free from intimidation and coercion of any kind. These rights would include, inter alia, freedom of movement within Cambodia, the choice of domicile and employment, and the right to property.

Sample Language: Respect for Human Rights

The human rights of displaced persons shall be fully respected and guaranteed under international law and national law, both during the resettlement process and thereafter. [Enumerate what these rights will include, i.e. to live in peace and security, to be free from coercion, etc.]

Implementation Mechanisms

Primary Note: Although the international legal basis for the return of displaced persons exists, such provisions are among the least executed. Two major problems that prevent implementation are: 1) lack of funding for repatriation; and 2) lack of monitoring and enforcement mechanisms. Agreements sometimes define the institutional framework, usually a commission, which will oversee the process, and also identify the commission members' selection process. Next, the drafters outline the functions of the commission, grant it a clear mandate to guide the implementation of the resettlement process, and provide specific milestones for the initial stages of the return process. Finally, assistance for facilitating the resettlement process is available through the UNHCR and the international community.

Formation of Commission and its Composition

Note: Most agreements that follow the UNHCR approach create a commission or task force to develop the mechanisms for return of displaced persons. The members of the commission vary depending on the Parties involved. For example, if displaced persons have fled to a neutral third country, that country sometimes participates in drafting the agreement and provide a representative for the commission.

Note: The Burundi Agreement establishes a rehabilitation Commission, its mandate, and the parties from which its members will be drawn, and additionally establishes a Sub-Commission to deal with issues regarding land, and undertakes to collaborate with asylum countries and the UNHCR.

Burundi Agreement, Protocol IV, Chapter I, Article 3, Paragraph a-c

The Government shall undertake the following preparatory activities:

Establishing and constituting a National Commission for the Rehabilitation of Sinistrés (CNRS), which shall have the mandate of organizing and coordinating, together with international organizations and countries of asylum, the return of refugees and sinistrés, assisting in their resettlement and reintegration, and dealing with all the other issues listed in the report of Committee IV. To this end, it shall draw up a plan of priorities. The members of the CNRS shall be drawn inter alia from the participating parties and the Government of Burundi, and shall elect the Commission's chairperson;

Establishing and constituting a Sub-Commission of the CNRS with the specific mandate of dealing with issues related to land as set out in article 8 (j) of the present Protocol;

Convening, in collaboration with the countries of asylum and the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, the Tripartite commissioner, involving in it representatives of the refugees and international observers.

Note: The Guatemala Agreement charges a Committee with implementation of the resettlement process, details its member composition, and allows for it to draft its own rules of procedure.

Guatemala Agreement, Article V, Paragraph 2

[T]he Parties agree to establish a Technical Committee for the implementation of the resettlement agreement, to be composed of two representatives designated by the Government, two representatives designated by the uprooted population groups and two representatives of donors, cooperating bodies and international cooperating agencies. The latter representatives shall have consultative status. The Committee shall draw up its own rules of procedure.

Note: The Georgia Agreement specifies the composition of a Commission, and designates representatives that are to participate in an observation capacity.

Georgia Agreement, Provision 6

The Commission shall be composed of four members, one being designated by each of the Parties and two representing the Russian Federation and the United National High Commissioner for Refugees. In addition, the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe (CSCE) will designate a representative to attend the Commission's meeting in an observer capacity. If circumstances do not allow the designated CSCE representative to attend such meetings, the Commission will keep the CSCE mission in Georgia informed on a regular basis on the progress of the Commission's work.

Note: The Bosnia Agreement designates an independent Commission for Displaced Persons and Refugees, delineates its member composition and term lengths, states the membership criteria of high moral standing and provides procedural guidelines.

Bosnia Agreement, Annex 7, Article VII and Article IX

The Parties hereby establish an independent Commission for Displaced Persons and Refugees (the "Commission"). The Commission shall have its headquarters in Sarajevo and may have offices at other locations as it deems appropriate.

The Commission shall be composed of nine members. Within 90 days after this Agreement enters into force, the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina shall appoint four members, two for a term of three years and the others for a term of four years, and the Republika Srpska shall appoint two members, one for a term of three years and the other for a term of four years. The President of the European Court of Human Rights shall appoint the remaining members, each for a term of five years, and shall designate one such member as the Chairman. The members of the Commission may be reappointed.

Members of the Commission must be of recognized high moral standing.

The Commission may sit in panels, as provided in its rules and regulations. References in this Annex to the Commission shall include, as appropriate, such panels, except that the power to promulgate rules and regulations is vested only in the Commission as a whole.

Note: The Cambodia Agreement establishes a limited term ad hoc consultative body comprised of multiple parties, including international agencies, to facilitate and monitor the repatriation of displaced persons.

Cambodia Agreement, Annex 4, Part III, Paragraph 10

The SNC (Supreme National Council), the Governments of the countries in which the Cambodian refugees and displaced persons have sought temporary refuge and the countries which contribute to the repatriation and integration effort will wish to monitor closely and facilitate the repatriation of the returnees. An ad hoc consultative body should be established for a limited term for these purposes. The UNHCR, the ICRC (International Committee of the Red Cross), other international agencies as appropriate, as well as UNTAC (United Nations Transitional Authority in Cambodia), would be invited to join as full participants.

Sample Language: Formation of The Commission And Its Composition

With the assistance of the international community and UNHCR, the Parties shall establish a Displaced Persons Commission, within [time period] of signature of this agreement to oversee, administer, and facilitate the resettlement process. The DPC will be comprised [of two representatives from each Party, two representatives designated by the displaced persons population, one representative from [a strategic country] and two representatives of donors, cooperating bodies and international agencies or as determined by the Parties].

Members of the DPC must be recognized as possessing a high moral standing.

The DPC shall meet as often as required, [but no less frequently than (insert specified period of time)]. Meetings of the DPC may be convened at the request of any of the members and shall be held [as determined by the Parties], except as the members of the DPC may otherwise agree. The Parties agree to guarantee the personal security of the members of the Commission and personnel involved in the activities agreed. The DPC shall have its headquarters in [designated location], and may have offices at other locations as it deems appropriate. The first meeting of the DPC shall be scheduled [as determined by the Parties].

The DPC shall have appropriate facilities and professionally competent staff, experienced in administrative, financial, banking and legal matters to assist in carrying out its functions. The staff shall be headed by an Executive Officer who shall be appointed by the DPC.

Functions of the Commission: Planning for Resettlement

Note: The commission is generally intended to create and implement a program for the sustainable reintegration of displaced persons. Thus, the language concerning the commission generally includes a clear mandate with specific tasks that the commission will undertake, and time frames within which tasks will be accomplished. In some cases, Parties have been unwilling or not serious about implementing the return process, and a lack of such mandate in the agreement resulted in a failure to commence the return of displaced persons. Therefore, language that provides for implementation of the resettlement process by establishing concrete steps and goals to be accomplished has proven to be an important part of a successful agreement. Expressly stating the mandate and functions of the commission in the Agreement has also enabled all participants to understand their roles and obligations.

Note: Agreements attempt to encompass a multitude of humanitarian, economic, and security concerns. The tasks that are included in the commission's mandate vary depending on the situation, and have included surveying the uprooted population and assessing its needs, creating and monitoring entry points, establishing transit and reception centers to assist returnees, providing documentation, and providing special consideration to the needs of vulnerable groups of displaced persons. A key function of certain commissions has been deciding disputes and claims involving real property, and some agreements have established the manner in which such proceedings will be conducted. Agreements tend to take into account the pace of organized return so that it reflects the absorption capacity of the country.

Note: The Burundi Agreement details the plan and objectives of the Commission with respect to resettlement and integration of refugees.

Burundi Agreement, Protocol IV, Chapter I, Article 4

The CNRS shall decide on the activities for the resettlement and integration of refugees and sinistrés in accordance with the priority plan taking into account the availability of resources, in order to achieve the following aims and objectives:

To ensure the socio-economic and administrative reintegration of the sinistrés;

To give all returning families, including female- and child-headed families, food aid, material support and assistance with health, education, agriculture and reconstruction until they become self-sufficient;

To provide communes, villages and collines with assistance in the reconstruction of community infrastructures and with support for income-generating activities, paying special attention to women and enhancing their roles in building and sustaining families and communities;

To settle all those who believe that they cannot yet return on sites close to home, in order to enable them to go and till their fields initially and return to their land later on;

To encourage, to the extent possible, grouped housing in the reconstruction policy in order to free cultivable land;

To ensure equity in the distribution of resources between the ethnic groups on the one hand and the provinces on the other, and to avoid overlap between the various parties involved;

To promote the participation of the population in the resettlement activities;

To help returnees to recover the property and bank accounts left in Burundi before their exile and whose existence has been duly proven;

To offer intensive language courses for returnees to mitigate the language problems;

To assist returnees in other areas such as medical services, psycho-social support, social security and retirement, education of children and the equivalency of diplomas awarded outside Burundi.”

Burundi Agreement, Protocol IV, Chapter I, Article 8, Sections i-k

Burundi's Land Act must be revised in order to adjust it to the current problems with respect to land management;

The Sub-Commission on Land established in accordance with article 3(b) of the present Protocol shall have the specific mandate of:

Examining all cases of land owned by old caseload refugees and state-owned land;

Examining disputed issues and allegations of abuse in the (re)distribution of land and ruling on each case in accordance with the above principles;

The Sub-Commission on Land must, in the performance of its functions, ensure the equity, transparency and good sense of all its decisions. It must always remain aware of the fact that the objective is not only restoration of their property to returnees, but also reconciliation between the groups as well as peace in the country.”

Note: The Guatemala Agreement outlines actions the Government may take to identify land that could be used for the resettlement of displaced populations, which include updating registers, conducting studies and selecting land.

Guatemala Agreement, Article III, Paragraphs 2 and 3

For the identification of land that could be used for resettling uprooted persons who do not own land but wish to acquire it, the Government undertakes to:

Carry out a review and updating of official land and real estate registers;

Conduct studies to identify and individualize all State-owned, municipally owned and private land, offering an option to purchase it. These studies shall include information on the location, legal regime, acquisition, size, boundaries and agricultural suitability of the land in question;

Complete these studies by the date of entry into force of the present agreement, at the latest.

The criteria for selecting land for settlements shall include the agro ecological potential of the soil, its price, the sustainability of natural resources and existing services.

Note: The Guatemala Agreement also outlines the responsibilities of the Committee to determine the needs of displaced persons through studies and analysis and then to supervise project implementation and allocation of funds.

Guatemala Agreement, Article V, Paragraphs 4 and 5

The Committee shall, from the time it is established until the entry into force of this Agreement, conduct the necessary evaluations and studies in order to identify and analyze the needs and demands of the uprooted population and to formulate projects corresponding to the various undertakings contained in the strategy determined in this Agreement. In carrying out said studies and analyses and formulating projects the Committee shall have the technical support of the corresponding specialized personnel.

Once the study phase is completed and as soon as this Agreement enters into force, the Committee shall be responsible for prioritizing and approving projects and supervising their execution, allocating the funds required in each case and securing technical and financial resources. The Parties agree that implementation of the strategy shall meet the criteria of priority to the struggle against poverty, efficient management, participation of the recipient populations and transparency concerning expenditures.

Note: The Georgia Agreement charges the Commission with the implementation of repatriation programs, including the establishment of a working group of experts to assess the overall housing situation.

Georgia Agreement, Provisions 5 and 9

The principal tasks of the Commission shall be to formulate, discuss and approve plans to implement programmes for the safe, orderly and voluntary repatriation of the refugees and displaced persons to Abkhazia from Georgia, the Russian Federation and within Abkhazia and for their successful reintegration. Such plans should include registration, transport, basic material assistance for a period of up to six months and rehabilitation assistance. In order to create the conditions for the return of refugees and displaced persons, the Commission will establish a working group of experts to undertake an assessment of the level of damage to the economic and social infrastructure in Abkhazia, the availability of housing and the extent of damage to houses in the areas of return as well as the projected needs in rehabilitation/reconstruction, with financial implications. This survey should be undertaken region by region according to the plan of return to be worked out and accepted by the Parties.

During its first meeting, the Commission will set out the modalities of the assessment mentioned in paragraph 5 above and will establish a plan concerning:

The areas where repatriation will be primarily conducted according to the level of guaranteed security and preparedness;

The implementation of an information campaign among the displaced person/refugee population to encourage voluntary return;

The registration process of persons expressing their willingness to return;

The activities needed to safeguard the safety of returnees based on the principles set out in paragraph 3 (a) to (j) above;

The needs for financial, transport and basic material assistance to displaced persons/refugees as well as projected needs for rehabilitation/reconstruction of the areas of return as mentioned in paragraph 5 above.

Note: The Bosnia Agreement calls for the cooperation of all relevant groups, including UNHCR, in implementing the phased return of displaced persons and for a Commission to handle all property claims.

Bosnia Agreement, Annex 7, Article I, Paragraph 5 and Article XI

The Parties call upon the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (“UNHCR”) to develop in close consultation with asylum countries and the Parties a repatriation plan that will allow for an early, peaceful, orderly and phased return of refugees and displaced persons, which may include priorities for certain areas and certain categories of returnees. The Parties agree to implement such a plan and to conform their international agreements and internal laws to it. They accordingly call upon States that have accepted refugees to promote the early return of refugees consistent with international law.

The Commission shall receive and decide any claims for real property in Bosnia and Herzegovina, where the property has not voluntarily been sold or otherwise transferred since April 1, 1992, and where the claimant does not now enjoy possession of that property. Claims may be for return of the property or for just compensation in lieu of return.

Sample Language: Functions of The Commission, Option 1

A comprehensive strategy for the return of displaced persons will be possible only within the framework of sustainable and equitable development of the resettlement areas for the benefit of all population groups. The strategy shall promote the reconciliation of the interests of [resettled population groups] and the population groups already living in the resettlement areas. In order to accomplish successful reintegration, there must be access to reasonable resources, opportunities and basic services to establish a self-sufficient livelihood in conditions of equal rights with other residents and citizens.

Sample Language: Functions of The Commission, Option 2

The DPC shall work in coordination and cooperation with international organizations, particularly [organization], in the formation and implementation of a strategy to ensure the sustainable return of displaced persons and development of the region.

The DPC shall promulgate such rules and regulations, consistent with this Agreement, as may be necessary to carry out its functions [within the time period as determined by the Parties].

[The DPC shall establish a working group of experts to collect data concerning the caseload of displaced persons wanting to return; areas of origin; distance from the border; availability of housing, economic and social infrastructure in the region; and projected needs for rehabilitation/reconstruction to ascertain the most effective means to return displaced persons.

The DPC shall institute an information campaign among the displaced persons to help them understand their rights, settlement options, and conditions in their home region, which will aid them in making an informed decision whether to return.

The DPC shall create and monitor entry points, transit and reception centers.

The DPC shall design mechanisms to monitor human rights conditions in areas of return.

The DPC shall implement programs to address the special needs of vulnerable groups within the uprooted populations, emphasizing the protection of female-headed families, widows and orphans.

The DPC shall implement programs to reconstruct and repair homes destroyed, damaged or in decay. Programs also shall be implemented to rebuild public utilities and other infrastructure necessary for the durable rehabilitation of communities.]

Sample Language: Functions of The Commission, Option 3

The framework of the strategy for reintegration of displaced persons should:

[Consider the needs of residents and displaced persons to prevent stigmatization and resentment.

Set up an initial support system to allow displaced persons to successfully return to the region.

Encourage participation and management of return by the displaced persons themselves to ensure successful reintegration.

Phase the process of return in approximately [time period], to build the foundation for a lasting and durable peace and ensure that local resources are not overwhelmed, reducing the likelihood of renewed tensions.

Make the first stage of return a [number of months] preliminary stage, with completion of this phase by [date as determined by the Parties]. The following shall be accomplished within such time:

Collection of data to ascertain the most effective return of displaced persons and which returnees satisfy the criteria for priority of return;

Creation of a comprehensive report on the mechanism of return, which will include time frames and logistical information;

Establishment of an information campaign among the displaced persons;

Formation of entry points, with a plan for monitoring them, upon commencement of the first phase of return;

Creation of Reception Centers within the communities of return;

Institution of programs to enable the rebuilding and repair of homes, public utilities, and infrastructure in communities affected by the return of displaced persons.]

Support and Assistance from the International Community

Note: Agreements generally seek assistance from the international community to fund and implement the resettlement programs. The agreement is shared with all UNHCR and government core staff involved in the operation, including field staff. When significant assistance is sought from the UNHCR, agreements can include them as a signatory.

Note: The Burundi Agreement expressly grants international and non-governmental organizations unrestricted access to returnees to administer humanitarian aid and also pledges the establishment of a National Fund to provide assistance.

Burundi Agreement, Protocol IV, Chapter I, Articles 7 and 9

The Government shall allow international organizations and international and local non-governmental organizations unrestricted access to returnees and other sinistrés for purposes of the delivery of humanitarian assistance. It must guarantee the safety of the staff of such organizations and must also facilitate the provision of short-term aid for repatriation, appropriately supervised and without discrimination.

A National Fund for Sinistrés shall be established, and shall derive its funding from the national budget and from grants by bilateral and multilateral aid agencies or assistance from non-governmental organizations.”

Note: The Guatemala Agreement recognizes the importance of cooperation with and support from the international community in order to complement domestic implementation of resettlement efforts with adequate means.

Guatemala Agreement, Part V, Paragraphs 3 and 6

The Parties recognize that the series of tasks relating to the resettlement of the uprooted population is of such breadth and complexity that the strong support of the international community is needed in order to complement the domestic efforts of the Government and of the various sectors of civil society. Otherwise, the Government's commitment would be limited by financial constraints.

For the purpose of ensuring implementation of the resettlement strategy, the Parties agree to establish a fund to implement the agreement on resettlement of population groups uprooted by armed conflict essentially with contributions from the international community. The United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) shall be asked to administer the funds of each of the projects to be executed.

Note: The Cambodia Agreement requests that repatriation be facilitated by the Secretary-General of the United Nations as an important part of the overall resettlement process.

Cambodia Agreement, Part V, Article 20

The Signatories request the Secretary-General of the United Nations to facilitate the repatriation in safety and dignity of Cambodian refugees and displaced persons, as an integral part of the comprehensive political settlement and under the overall authority of the Special Representative of the Secretary-General, in accordance with the guidelines and principles on the repatriation of refugees and displaced persons as set forth in Annex 4.

Note: The Mozambique Agreement identifies the need to organize assistance for uprooted populations to return to their places of origin and seeks to employ the United Nations with implementation of such plan.

Mozambique Agreement, Protocol III, Article IV, Paragraph b

Without prejudice to the liberty of movement of citizens, the Government shall draw up a draft agreement with RENAMO to organize the necessary assistance to refugees and displaced persons, preferably in their original places of residence. The parties agree to seek the involvement of the competent United Nations agencies in the drawing up and implementation of this plan. The International Red Cross and other organizations to be agreed upon shall be invited to participate in the implementation of the plan.

Note: The Macedonia Agreement identifies the need for a rehabilitation plan and invites the assistance of the international community in implementation and financing of the plan.

Macedonia Agreement, Annex C, Paragraph 3.2-3.3.

The Government with the participation of the parties will complete an action plan within 30 days after the signature of the Framework Agreement for rehabilitation of and reconstruction in areas affected by the hostilities. The parties invite the international community to assist in the formulation and implementation of this plan.

The parties invite the European Commission and the World Bank to rapidly convene a meeting of international donors after adoption in the Assembly of the Constitutional amendments in Annex A and the revised Law on Local Self-Government to support the financing of measures to be undertaken for the purpose of implementing the Framework Agreement and its Annexes, including measures to strengthen local self-government and reform the police services, to address macro-financial assistance to the Republic of Macedonia, and to support the rehabilitation and reconstruction measures identified in the action plan identified in paragraph 3.2 [previous paragraph].

Note: The Sierra Leone Agreement seeks assistance and funding from the international community in order to implement a repatriation and reintegration plan in concert with international custom and law.

Sierra Leone Agreement, Part Five, Article XXII

The Parties through the National Commission for Resettlement, Rehabilitation and Reconstruction agree to seek funding from and the involvement of the UN and other agencies, including friendly countries, in order to design and implement a plan for voluntary repatriation and reintegration of Sierra Leonean refugees and internally displaced persons, including non-combatants, in conformity with international conventions, norms and practices.

Note: The Liberia Agreement calls upon UNHCR, UNDP and other organizations to assist in the implementation of repatriation and reintegration programs for displaced persons.

Liberia Agreement, Article 18, Paragraph 3

The Parties also call upon the relevant organizations of the United Nations system, particularly the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees and the United Nations Development Programme, other intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations, to implement programmes for the voluntary repatriation, return and reintegration of the Liberian refugees and internally displaced persons.

Sample Language: Support and Assistance

The Parties to this agreement request and invite the international community to provide financial, technical, and material support and resources to ensure that the resettlement process takes place fully, efficiently, and with respect to dignity and safety for the returnees. The Parties recognize that, without such assistance, any resettlement programs will be very difficult to implement. The Parties are committed to cooperating in all necessary ways to ensure that the resources are used for the benefit of the uprooted population.

SUMMARIES OF AGREEMENTS ADDRESSING REFUGEES AND IDPS

Primary Note: The following summaries briefly describe the conflicts that uprooted population groups and the various types of language used in peace agreements that dealt with those issues. Of the peace agreements signed since 1989, ten contain provisions addressing the resettlement of displaced persons. The ten agreements are summarized according to their thoroughness, beginning with the most comprehensive: Burundi, Guatemala, Georgia, Bosnia, Cambodia, Mozambique, Kosovo, Macedonia, Sierra Leone, and Liberia.

Burundi

Since 1993, fighting between the Hutu and Tutsi factions in Burundi has caused mass destruction, death and displacement of populations. The Arusha Peace and Reconciliation Agreement, signed 28 August 2000, attempted to establish peace within the country among these two groups. The agreement provides one of the most detailed treatments regarding displaced persons. It presents principles that the government will uphold with respect to the right of voluntary return and the right to property, states that the government will establish a National Commission for the Rehabilitation of Sinistrés (CNRS) to organize the resettlement process, and provides the CNRS with a list of objectives to accomplish. The agreement also sets forth principles and mechanisms to be applied to resolve issues relating to land and property and provides for extra protection to vulnerable groups. Because not all rebel groups were involved in the negotiations, however, a ceasefire agreement was not achieved. The security situation has worsened since the agreement was signed, and the continued fighting has prevented implementation of the agreement and displaced thousands more people.

Guatemala

In the early 1990s, the Guatemalan government and rebel guerrillas signed a series of peace agreements, ending a 36-year-old conflict that killed over 100,000 people and created over one million displaced persons. The Guatemala Agreement on Resettlement of the Population Groups Uprooted by the Armed Conflict signed 17 June 1994, has a separate agreement addressing the resettlement of persons displaced by the conflict. The agreement provides guarantees to returning populations especially concerning the issue of land rights. It creates a Technical Committee for the implementation of the resettlement agreement and directs it to analyze the needs of the uprooted populations and to formulate development projects corresponding with the strategy set forth in the agreement. The agreement calls for a fund, drawing upon contributions from the international community, to implement the resettlement strategy. Many displaced persons have benefited from the land and reintegration programs, but the success of the operation is constrained by a shortage of fertile land. Many displaced persons have also been excluded from the resettlement process because they were dispersed, not targeted as displaced, and/or were unaware of the process.

Georgia

Fighting broke out in 1989 over the secession of South Ossetia from Georgia, causing the flight of 50,000 South Ossetians to North Ossetia and 23,000 Georgians to Georgia proper. Although a ceasefire was reached in May 1992, secessionist fighting broke out in Abkhazia in mid-1992 when the republic declared its independence from Georgia, and 250,000 Georgians fled that conflict. In 1994, in an attempt to reverse what constituted the expulsion of an entire ethnic group, UNHCR negotiated the Quadripartite Agreement on Voluntary Return of Refugees and Displaced Persons, signed 4 April 1994. The agreement established specific principles for the voluntary return and safety of displaced persons and established a Commission to implement programs for the resettlement process. The agreement further assigned the Commission a list of tasks for its first meeting and gave authority to UNHCR to oversee the process. The implementation of the agreement, however, had to be suspended when the Abkhazians insisted that Abkhazia settle its political status before repatriation occurred. Only a minority of the Georgian population displaced from Abkhazia has been able to return, leaving 249,000 still displaced as of January 2003. An additional 12,000 persons remain displaced as a result of the conflict in South Ossetia.

Bosnia

Annex 7 of the Dayton Accords is an Agreement on Refugees and Displaced Persons, signed 14 December 1995. Chapter One sets forth the rights of refugees and IDPs, including the right of voluntary return and guarantees of safety and security, and requires cooperation with international organizations. Chapter Two establishes a Commission for Displaced Persons and Refugees, and sets forth the process by which the Commission will decide disputes over property. The agreement also provides for a strong international presence. Constant pressure from the international community has led to a relatively successful resettlement process with 500,000 IDPs and 420,000 refugees returning to their pre-war homes. The restitution of property to displaced persons is also moving ahead, although additional property repossession legislation had to be adopted to overcome political obstruction by nationalist forces, and more than 80,000 property claimants are still unable to recover their property.

Cambodia

After twenty-two years of war, Cambodia's infrastructure was severely damaged. The Agreement on a Comprehensive Political Settlement of the Cambodia Conflict was signed on 23 October 1991. Part V: Refugees and Displaced Persons provides the right to voluntary return and requests that the United Nations facilitate the repatriation. Annex 4: Repatriation of Cambodian Refugees and Displaced Persons sets forth the commitment to create the conditions necessary for return. It also establishes an ad hoc consultative body for a limited term with the Parties and international groups serving as participants and invites the generous financial contributions of the international community. The repatriation process happened more quickly than expected, and the UNHCR's presence in the country before the peace accords allowed it to play an important role in establishing repatriation routes and reception centers during the initial period. Although the repatriation was virtually accomplished by the time elections took place in May 1993, the military disarmament and demobilization did not. The Khmer Rouge remained armed and sporadic fighting caused the displacement of several thousand more people over the next several years.

Mozambique

Three decades of armed conflict concluded with the 1992 General Peace Agreement for Mozambique, signed on 4 October 1992, between the Mozambique Liberation Front and the opposition forces of the Mozambique National Resistance. The conflict caused more than 1.7 million people to flee to other countries, and more than twice that many were internally displaced. In Protocol III, the agreement addresses freedom of the press, freedom of association, liberty of movement, return of refugees and IDPs, and electoral procedures. In five paragraphs, the Parties undertake to cooperate in the repatriation process, agree to seek the involvement of the United Nations agencies in drafting a plan, provide that displaced persons forfeit no rights or freedoms, insist that displaced persons be registered and included in the electoral rolls, and guarantee the restitution of property to displaced persons. Spontaneous repatriation began even before the peace agreement was signed, and the vast majority of displaced persons returned before elections were held in October 1994. UNHCR played a key role in reintegration providing transportation for vulnerable groups and protecting the returnees. With the signing of the peace accords and after almost all fighting ended and the cooperation of all Parties was eventually attained, few security problems arose. The repatriation operation officially ended in July 1996, and its success was attributed to the strong will of the Mozambican people to build peace and the international community's immediate commitment of substantial resources.

Kosovo

Kosovo is an international protectorate under United Nations administration. The Interim Agreement for Peace and Self-Government in Kosovo, signed 23 February 1999, devotes two paragraphs of Article II to the return of refugees. The agreement recognizes the right to return and provides that all measures necessary to facilitate the safe return of persons will be taken, including issuing necessary documents. It also provides the right to recover property and other possessions. Finally, the Parties agree to cooperate with the UNHCR and other organizations in implementing the return process. Although the return process has begun, the recent withdrawal of NATO peacekeeping forces may dissuade potential returnees who fear for their safety.

Macedonia

The displacement of persons in Macedonia is a relatively recent phenomenon, beginning in 2001 when the National Liberation Army began fighting for the rights of ethnic Albanians in Macedonia. At the peak of the fighting, 70,000 people were displaced. With the signing of the Framework Agreement of 13 August 2001, which resulted in a constitutional change recognizing the rights of the minority Albanians, the situation has steadily improved. As of August 2002, only 7,421 persons remained displaced. The Agreement devotes three paragraphs of Annex C to Refugee Return, Rehabilitation and Reconstruction. It provides that all Parties will work to ensure the return of displaced persons. The Government pledges to complete an action plan for rehabilitation and reconstruction of areas to be resettled within thirty days. Finally, the Parties invite the international community to finance the measures to be undertaken.

Sierra Leone

After more than a decade of civil war, the Peace Agreement Between the Government of Sierra Leone and the Revolutionary United Front of Sierra Leone was signed on 7 July 1999. The agreement addresses the displaced persons situation in two Articles. Article XXIII states that the Parties agree to seek funding from the UN and other agencies to design and implement a plan for the reintegration of refugees and IDPs in conformity with international norms. Article XXIII guarantees that the Parties will take effective and appropriate measures to ensure the displaced persons rights to asylum are fully respected. The Resettlement Strategy applied to IDPs as well as refugees and provided for resettlement once areas were declared safe; by the end of 2002, all but two of the chiefdoms were declared safe and 220,000 displaced persons were resettled. However, many returnees have returned to areas with little to no infrastructure or facilities, and security remains fragile because of poor living conditions, overcrowding, human rights abuses, and the highly volatile situation in neighboring Liberia.

Liberia

Civil war in Liberia has continued for over a decade, despite the signing of a peace agreement on 25 July 1993. The agreement addressed the Repatriation of Refugees in Article 18, but without an effective end to the fighting, no resettlement process could occur. In May 2003, the UN estimated that there were over 200,000 IDPs in Liberia, and the country teeters on the brink of a humanitarian disaster.

ABOUT THE PUBLIC INTERNATIONAL LAW & POLICY GROUP

The Peace Drafter's Handbook is a product of the Public International Law & Policy Group, a 501(c)(3) non-profit committed to providing global pro bono legal assistance to states and non-state entities involved in peace negotiations and in bringing war criminals to justice. PILPG also provides policy formulation advice and training on matters related to conflict resolution. This Handbook can be found on our web site (<http://www.pilgp.org>). A CD-ROM version of the Handbook is also available.

PILPG has advised over a dozen countries on the legal aspects of peace negotiations and constitution drafting, and over fifteen countries in Europe, Asia and Africa concerning fundamental questions of public international law and foreign relations. PILPG has also advised four international criminal tribunals.

The four primary practice areas of PILPG are:

- Peacebuilding
- International Justice
- Post-Conflict Political Development
- Public International Law

As a pro bono law firm, PILPG relies almost exclusively on volunteer legal assistance from more than sixty legal advisors and former diplomats, as well as major international law firms. On average PILPG is able to provide over $1.5 million worth of pro bono services annually.

PILPG provides legal assistance to a large number of clients without a physical infrastructure or any full time paid staff, and is thereby able to commit over 95 percent of its resources directly to project activities. Frequently, PILPG sends members in-country to facilitate the provision of legal assistance, and its members often serve on the delegations of its clients during peace negotiations.

PILPG maintains volunteer points of contact in Washington DC, New York City, Boston, Seattle, Cleveland, London, Paris, Rome, The Hague, Stockholm, Belfast, Krakow, Budapest, Zurich, Tbilisi, Kabul, and Nairobi.

From 1996-1998, PILPG operated under the auspices of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. In July 1999, PILPG was granted official Non-Governmental Organizations status by the United Nations.
